

A SPACE TO CONNECT

Heritage listed Legion House, originally constructed in 1902 for the YWCA, served as a women's hostel and outreach service for over 60 years. Reopened in 2013, it has been artfully refurbished into one of the most sustainable designs in the world.

The Ethics Centre carries on the building's rich social tradition using what was once a classroom and dancehall as its creative space for conversations about the things that matter.

Designed for diversity, our creative space is perfect for:

Events

Meetings

More than 25 years ago, philosopher and Executive Director Dr Simon Longstaff set up a humble circle of chairs in the centre of Sydney's bustling CBD and invited people to join a conversation. Everyone was welcome. It was a safe place to talk about the things that matter – issues of concern, large and small, that cut to the heart and centre of being human.

Today, The Ethics Centre is a not-for-profit organisation developing a range of innovative programs, services and experiences, designed to bring ethics to the centre of professional and personal life, and align actions with values. At our core, we remain committed to injecting a pause into the centre of public life and allowing people to stop, connect with others and have real conversations about our everyday lives.

A space to connect in the heart of the city.

Since classical times, philosophy has been fundamentally concerned with getting at the essential truths to the big questions of life, the universe and basically everything. For all the big words, large books and long beards, thinkers have simply been trying to help us know ourselves and each other, so together, we can live better lives.

Great things happen when we come together to talk, share ideas, hear from others, challenge our thinking, work things through, or stop and mark key moments. We invite you to share our space and host your own events, meetings, workshops, forums or celebrations. We warmly welcome you and your guests to fill this space with your ideas and stories so together we can create a vibrant pulse that radiates far out into our city.
